

The U. S. Executive Branch

			POTUS Foreign Affairs Cabinet, Comprising The Nine COCOM Commanders
Three Brothers Doctrine			COCOMs Are Geographic Headquarters Of The Joint Force			Revolution In Foreign Affairs
Principle I The United States have no interest in the domestic affairs of other countries and expect other countries to reciprocate by having no interest in our domestic affairs. The United States have interest in the lines of communication running between The United States and all other countries and expect all other countries to bear fairly the burden of keeping those lines open, safe, reliable, fair, and clean.				Principle II The United States welcome alliance with our brother nations India and Russia for enforcement, from their perspective, of the ground of statecraft set forth in Principle I and urge Japan and Egypt to join us for that endeavor and commitment.
			Principle III An order to deploy which lacks or frustrates intent to compel a target to sign a declaration of unconditional surrender is an unlawful order by the Rules of Just War, the Conventions of War, Common Sense, and the Spirit of America. An order to deploy conveys this intent to the Commanding Officer: win this war / battle in a timely manner or do not come back alive.
THE JOINT FORCE comprises Diplomacy Finance War-Fighting State Treasury Defense Departments					THE PENTA-FORCE comprises Space Air Cyber Sea and Land Forces Space Force Air Force Cyber Force Navy Army
		The Penta-Force Is One Component Of The Joint Force

The Nine COCOMs
ARCOM	TRECOM	MEDCOM	CASCOM	INDOCOM	SOPACOM	NOPACOM	SOLANTICOM	NOLANTICOM
Lands bordering the Arctic Ocean and contiguous waters north of 57 degrees north latitude.	Lands bordering the Adriatic, Black, and Baltic Seas.	Lands bordering the Mediterranean and Red Seas plus the Gulfs of Oman, Persia, and Aden.	Lands comprising the Inner Asian, Mongoloid, hot (desert/glacier) land: from Armenia/ Azerbaijan on a line through the Caspian Sea, to Kazakhstan, Mongolia, Gansu and Sichuan China, Tibet, Afghanistan, Turkmenistan, and back through the Caspian Sea to Armenia/ Azerbaijan.	Lands bordering the Indian Ocean, the Arabian, Laccadive and Andaman Seas, and the Bay of Bengal.	Lands bordering the Pacific Ocean and contiguous waters south of 20 degrees north latitude.	Lands bordering the Pacific Ocean and contiguous waters north of 20 degrees north latitude.	Lands bordering the Atlantic Ocean and contiguous waters south of 14 degrees north latitude.	Lands bordering the Atlantic Ocean and contiguous waters north of 14 degrees north latitude.

	A COCOM Commander's National Opportunity Council (NOC) – comparable to a General's CIG – comprises nine persons: two from SecState, one for in-theatre nations' foreign and domestic affairs, one for all nations' foreign and domestic affairs, the same from SecTreasury, and five from SecDef, one from each component of the Penta-Force.
							SecState, SecTreasury, and SecDef are support staff for the COCOM Commanders. They provide recruiting, training, intelligence, procurement, provisioning, logistics, billeting, and finance for the COCOM Commanders.
				Current components of DOD and their five branches of service work to execute SecDef's responsibility to support the COCOM Commanders. These include DIA, TRADOC and their other-service counterparts, recruiting and basic training systems, four service academies, branch advanced professional schools, "skunk-works" ("hair-brained"-type) research facilities, procurement and supply trains, analysis and evaluation competence, etc.

The nine responsibilities of a COCOM Commander's Staff are Joint Force responsibilities.

Personnel J-1

Intelligence J-2

Operations J-3

Logistics J-4

Plans J-5

Signals J-6

Training J-7

Finance J-8

Civilian-Military Cooperation J-9:

COCOM Commanders are up-through-the-ranks military officers promoted to a new rank – Supreme Commander, Field Marshall, (?) – and wearing a unique uniform clean-stripped of all but rank insignia.

Authority to classify documents rests with POTUS, SecState, SecTreasury, and SecDefense – and that with them personally aware of what is in each document they are classifying.

The Nine COCOMs outward face The United States of America. They replace US embassies and consulates. Their State and Treasury Department personnel do the work – immigration, passports, intelligence, trade compliance, etc. – formerly done by embassies and consulates.

The COCOM writ is to observe, report, consult – with POTUS, SecState, SecTreasury, and SecDefense – and remove obstacles, thrown up by governments and citizens of other nations, to diminish fair and reciprocal trade by Americans with governments and citizens of other nations. This includes Americans who throw up such obstacles.

Chiefs of the branches of The Penta-Force report to SecDef and his Chief of Staff. The offices of Secretary of [Branch] and Deputy SecDef have ceased to exist. Each branch runs their own procurement, recruiting, training, and testing.

COCOM requirements govern procurement, recruiting, training, and testing by State, Treasury, and Defense.

Distributed authority is the keystone of an institution's happiness, skill, productivity, success, and respect.

The current structure, itself, of USG Executive Branch prevents good governance. The structure itself attracts the low-minded and repels the high-minded. The structure itself is a hive of bolt-ons stuck into proximity but not system by swarms of Good Idea Fairies. So, its residents become small in mind and focused on complexities they cannot understand or treat rationally.

Before the people are a problem, the very structure they are given to work is the problem. Good governance cannot come from this current structure of the USG Executive Branch. (Ditto the other two Branches, in different ways, but my focus now is in the Executive Branch). Current USG structure is complex and self-annulling. For example, command of US assets overseas remains split between State, Defense, DOJ, Treasury, Agriculture, DHS, and CIA. That is a clear invitation to conflict American interests.

The current structure itself of USG, all three Branches, begs radical simplification. I, and I am sure others, are applying energy to effort to outline the same conceptually. Good governance of The United States requires this action. To those who say no governance of The United States is needful because national sovereignty is a thing of the past, that Global Governance is here through The Great Reset or some other "project," I say, give it your best shot.

